REPORT 10 (1971) - STATUTE LAW REVISION

Preface

The Law Reform Commission is constituted by the Law Reform Commission Act, 1967. The Commissioners are-

The Honourable Mr Justice Reynolds, Chairman
Mr R. D. Conacher, Deputy Chairman
Mr C. R. Allen
Professor D. G. Benjafield
Mr T. W. Waddell, Q.C.

The offices of the Commission are in the Goodsell Building, 8-12 Chifley Square, Sydney.

This is the tenth report of the Commission on a reference from the Attorney-General. Its short citation is L.R.C. 10.

REPORT 10 (1971) - STATUTE LAW REVISION

REPORT

First Report on Statute Law Revision

To the Honourable K. M. McCaw., M.L.A.,
Attorney-General for New South Wales.

1. On the 11th of March, 1966, you made a reference to this Commission to review the Imperial Acts in force in New South Wales. On the same date, you made a second reference calling on the Commission, after the review of the Imperial Acts, to consider and review the statutes of New South Wales, with a view to their re-enactment where necessary in modern form, but retaining their existing spirit and intendment.

2. A report (L.R.C. 4) on Imperial Acts was made on the 14th of November, 1967. We now make a first report under the second reference. The purpose of this report is to recommend the repeal, subject to savings of a number of enactments which are no longer needed.

3. The reasons for the recommendations are various. A number of the Acts deal with a vesting or divesting of title to land. Those Acts achieved their purpose immediately upon coming into force and do not operate presently or prospectively. In one sense they are immediately spent and, given the appropriate savings clause, there is no reason why they should be retained. In a similar category are those Acts which authorize the carrying out of works, the raising of loans or the expenditure of public money. Once the works are completed, the money spent or the loan raised, there is no reason for retaining the Acts.

4. Some Acts are obsolete because they dealt with a transient situation or an event long since passed. For example, the Commonwealth War Loan (Investment Enabling) Act, 1915, the Australia's One Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary Celebrations Act, 1936, the Motion Picture Sound Equipment Leases Act, 1931. Some are obsolete because of social and industrial change and progress. The Felons Apprehension Act, 1899, which provides for outlawry of suspected felons and others is an example. Another example is the Coal-lumpers Baskets Act of 1900, which regulates the size of baskets to be used by coal-lumpers in discharging coal from ships, a coal-lumper being a person who carries coal by manual labour. Some have expired by effluxion of time. For example, the Legal Practitioners (War Service) Amendment Act, 1940, contains a provision that the Act shall continue in force for the duration of the war between His Majesty and Germany and her allies and until the 30th day of June in the year next following the year in which peace is declared, and no longer.

5. A number of Acts proposed for repeal are in a special category not encountered in England but arising by reason of the federal system in Australia. These statutes have ceased to operate because they are inconsistent with the law of the Commonwealth and are, for this reason, invalid (Commonwealth of Australia Constitution, section 109). They relate to various subject matters within the legislative competence of the Commonwealth where the Commonwealth has passed legislation intended to supersede State law. In these cases, where the Commonwealth has evinced an intention to express by its enactment completely exhaustively or exclusively what shall be the law governing the particular conduct or matter to which its intention is directed, an inconsistency and consequent invalidity of the New South Wales Act arises. (Ex parte McLean (1930) 43 C.L.R. 472; O'Sullivan v. Noarlunga Meat Limited (1954) 92 C.L.R. 565, affirmed by Privy Council (1956) 95 C.L.R. 177.)

6. If the Commonwealth should vacate any legislative field it has entered, the existing New South Wales Acts in that field would again become operative. "Invalid" in section 109 of the Constitution means "inoperative" and the inconsistent State Act remains in abeyance unless and until the Commonwealth legislation should be no longer law. (Butler v. The Attorney General (Victoria) (1961) 106 C.L.R. 268.)

7. Notwithstanding this position the balance of convenience favours a repeal. The practicalities are that the Commonwealth would not vacate a field without due notice to enable the States to legislate afresh in accordance with prevailing needs and requirements and the State of New South Wales would not wish to rely on the outmoded legislation. Repeal of some of these Acts was doubtless considered premature upon the occasion of earlier revisions but is now timely.

8. Examples of statutes which fall into this category are:

The Australasian Naval Force Act of 1887
Quarantine Act, 1897
Bankruptcy Act, 1898
Income Tax Act, 1911
Bonded Distilleries and Sugar Houses Act of 1862

9. There is one case where we propose a repeal because the Act in question has been held to be invalid by the High Court. This is the State Transport Co-ordination (Barring of Claims and Remedies Act, 1954, which was held invalid in the case of Antill Ranger & Co. Pty Ltd v. Commissioner for Motor Transport (1955) 93 C.L.R. 83.

10. Repeals in accordance with our recommendations would not get rid of all the legislation which is no longer needed. The class of legislation considered for repeal in the work leading to this report have been deliberately confined. That work has been lengthy and painstaking. The work has involved asking many others, especially people in government departments, to answer inquiries also involving lengthy and painstaking work. To go further at this stage would have taken too long and would have tried unduly the patience of those who ought to be consulted.

11. Consideration was therefore confined to two classes of Acts. One class comprised Acts which were candidates for total repeal. The second class comprised Acts which, in addition to matter to which the Amendments Incorporation Act, 1906, applied, matter, that is, making textual alterations to other Acts, contained matter possibly ripe for repeal, so as to leave standing only provisions making what we might call "incorporable amendments".

12. For a time we favoured the total repeal of the second class of Acts, subject to a special saving for the textual alterations to other Acts. But in the end we gave up the idea, because of the limited utility of such a repeal and the difficulty of drafting a satisfactory savings clause, and in deference to the views of people who know the statute book better than we do. As to this class of Acts, therefore, our recommendation is that they be repealed, excepting however the provisions making incorporable amendments.

13. The enactments which the proposed Bill would repeal are enactments which, in our opinion, may safely be repealed. The Commission has consulted others by way of safeguard. Thus in respect of each enactment, the Commission has consulted officers in the Departments of the Ministers having the administration of the enactment. Further the Commission has consulted the statutory authorities, church bodies, clubs and other organizations appearing to the Commission to be specially affected by or concerned with the several enactments. With minimal exceptions, we do not propose a repeal without the concurrence, or absence of objection, of those consulted in relation to the enactment.

14. We should say something about the savings in section 3 of the proposed Bill. ". . . At common law the repeal of a statute or statutory provision means that the law must be applied as if the provision had never existed. This is subject to an exception, variously expressed, as to past matters. Lord Tenterden C.J. used the expression 'transactions past and closed': Surtees v. Ellison ((1829) 9 B. & C. 750, at p. 752; 109 E.R. 278, at p. 279). Lord Campbell C.J. said:

'all matters that have taken place under it before its repeal are valid and cannot be called in question': Reg. v. Inhabitants of Denton ((1852) Dears. 3, at p. 8; 169 E.R. 612, at p. 614). The phrase of Rlackburn J. was 'transactions already completed under it' - Butcher v. Henderson ((1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 335, at p. 338)" (Chang Jeeng v. Nuffield (Aust.) Pty Ltd (1959) 101 C.L.R. 629 at p. 637, Dixon C.J.).

15. This state of the law led to the practice of inserting savings clauses in repealing Acts in varying forms, but directed to preserving the past operation of the Acts repealed. See for example the Act 15 Vic. No. 12, s. 1. The next step was to pass Acts making general provision for the effect of repeals by subsequent Acts. Acts of this kind were first passed in England in 1850 (Lord Brougham's Act; 13 & 14 Vict. c. 21) and in New South Wales in 1852 (16 Vic. No. 1). In both places the Acts were later consolidated with alterations. See now, for England, the Interpretation Act 1889, s. 38 and, for New South Wales, the Interpretation Act, 1897, ss. 6, 8. The New South Wales provisions correspond to the English except in one respect. The exception is that England has, but New South Wales has not, a provision to the effect that, unless a contrary intention appears, a repeal shall not revive anything not in force or existing at the time at which the repeal takes effect (Interpretation Act 1889, s. 38 (2) (a)).

16. These general savings have been of considerable utility, although the repeal of an Act of any complexity has still called for special savings. See for example the Companies Act, 1961, s. 4. A practice grew up, however, of putting elaborate savings, known as the Westbury savings, in statute law revision Acts. This practice, originating in England at the instance of Lord Westbury, was followed in the three statute law revision Acts passed in New South Wales (in 1898, 1924 and 1937) but has been abandoned in England in recent years. The English Statute Law Revision Act 1958 and subsequent statute law revision Acts rely on the general savings in section 38 of the Interpretation Act 1889. See Halsbury's Laws of England, 3rd edn Vol. 36 (1961) p. 473 note (r), see also this Commission's report on the application of Imperial Acts (L.R.C. 4) pp. 33, 34.

17. We think that, subject to two additional savings, the provisions of sections 6 and 8 of the Interpretation Act, 1897, are sufficient for the purposes of the present Bill. Savings clauses are an unfortunate necessity. The more extensive a savings clause, the more qualified the repeal and the less useful is the statute law revision Act. Special savings should not be introduced unless a clear case of utility can be seen or unless a possibility of its utility cannot be dispelled except by inordinate work.

18. The first of the additional savings which we propose is that a repeal is not to revive anything not in force or existing at the time when the repeal comes into force (section 3 (1) (a) of the proposed Bill). A similar provision occurs in section 38 (2) (a) of the English Act of 1889 and in most other Interpretation Acts. Our Interpretation Act, by section 6, provides that a repealed enactment is not to be revived by the repeal of the repealing enactment, except by express words. The proposed section 3(1)(a) supplements section 6 by preventing the revival of common law doctrine in case an enactment displacing that doctrine is abolished, or the revival of something which is not, or may not be, an "enactment" within the meaning of section 6. For example, section 3(1)(a) would (in the absence of section 44 (5) of the Matrimonial Causes Act 1959) foreclose any question of the revival of the action for criminal conversation upon the repeal of section 92 of the Matrimonial Causes Act 1899, and would foreclose any question of a revival of the ordinances rescinded by section 13 of the Local Government (Electoral Provisions) Act, 1941, upon the repeal of that section.

19. The second of the additional savings which we propose is, that the repeal is not to affect the proof of any past act or thing (section 3(1)(b) of the proposed Bill). The subsection is taken in substance from one of the provisions of the Westbury savings: see for example the Statute Law Revision Act, 1937, s. 4 (1) (g). An example of the operation of this saving may be given by reference to section 146 (2) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1898, which the proposed Bill would repeal. By that subsection a copy of the Gazette containing notice of a sequestration order is evidence of the order having been duly made and of its date. By section 4 (1) (c), such a copy of a Gazette might be relied on in support of a title to land, notwithstanding repeal of the Bankruptcy Act. The precursors of section 3 (1) (b) have included a second limb to the effect that the repeal is not to affect the admissibility or inadmissibility of evidence with respect to any past act or thing. We do not think that this second limb adds, anything to section 3 (1) (b) as it appears in the proposed Bill; it is therefore omitted.

20. We are grateful for the careful and tedious work done by many people in government departments, statutory authorities, church bodies, clubs, and other organizations at the request of the Commission for the purposes of this report.

21. We recommend legislation along the lines of the appended draft Bill.

R. G. REYNOLDS, Chairman.

R. D. CONACHERL Commissioner.

9 December, 1970.

Proposed Bill

A BILL

To promote the revision of the statute law by repealing enactments which have ceased to be in force or have become unnecessary; and for purposes connected therewith.

BE it enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly of New South Wales in Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:-

1. This Act may be cited as the "Statute Law Revision Act, 1970". Short title.
2. Each Act mentioned in the Schedule to this Act is, to the extent therein expressed, hereby repealed. Repeal.
3. (1) The repeal by this Act of any enactment does not- Saving.
 - (a) revive anything not in force or existing at the time at which the repeal takes effect; or Act No. 1937, s.(1)(a).
 - (b) affect the proof of any past act or thing.
- (2) This section does not limit any saving in the Interpretation Act, 1897. Act No. 1937, s.4(4).
